Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US 6,740,783 to Jun et al. in view of the Elnicke et al. article.

Applicant's invention is directed to a composition and method for the production thereof involving a zeolitic material of specific characteristics in combination with a binder material.

Jun et al. are relied on for the disclosure of hydrophobic zeolite material having a ratio of silica to alumina commensurate with that claimed herein. The zeolite is also contains the metal cations employed by applicant. Jun et al. differ from the instantly claimed invention in the use of a binder.

The Elnicke et al. article is relied on solely for the showing that the use of a binder in combination with hydrophobic zeolitic material is known. The instantly claimed selection of the well-known binders such as silica-alumina would have been within the skill of the artisan, and would have been motivated by the availability of the materials and the known characteristics associated with the chosen materials, i.e. desired level of acidity, expectation of increased surface area and strength, and so forth. Accordingly, it is considered that the artisan armed with the prior art of record would have found it obvious to employ an inorganic binder with the zeolite of Jun et al. with the expectation of success and with the expectation of an improved zeolitic material.

Conclusion

Applicants are advised that any evidence to be provided under 37 CFR 1.131 or 1.132 and any amendments to the claims and specification should be submitted prior to final rejection to be considered timely. It is anticipated that the next office action will be a final rejection.
